LEGISLATIVE
ACTIVITIES
TO DATE

The first session of the new legislature was brought to a close on Tuesday night at 11 o'clock, when the Lt. Governor prorogued the house. It is expected that a short fall session will be held to deal with the matter of the income tax.

A total of 98 bills was passed during the session. This is somewhat larger in number than formerly, but this year the new government adopted the practice of introducing many of the small amending acts as separate bills, instead of grouping them all together in one bill known as the Statute Law Amendments, which was generally the custom. This made the number of bills larger than in former years, but it provided a more convenient method of dealing with legislation and a more convenient method of reference in future.

During the last hours of the session, a division occurred on the first reading of the act, to provide a tax on gasoline, which resulted in a vote of 40 to 9 for the act. The act imposes a tax of two cents a gallon, to be collected from the first vendor of the gasoline in the province.

The Southern Alberta relief act passed through on amendment being submitted by the attorney-general limiting liability of farmers for seed, twine and labor to $500.

In providing for the suspension of the operation of the medical professions act for one year so far as chiropractors were concerned, Attorney-General Brownlee made provision against any wholesale influx of chiropractors to the province, by making it possible for resident chiropractors to secure interim licenses for the year from the registrar of the university, on production of evidence that they are graduates of recognized chiropractic schools. Incoming chiropractors must do the same.

During the session a large number of returns covering many phases of government were asked for by members, some of the returns asked for toward the close of the session are not yet completed, but all the returns brought down will be printed in the Journals of the session. Returns asked for during the final week of the session, included one by Mr. Mitchell in connection with the maintenance of civilian patients in the Central Alberta sanatorium, and the cost thereof, one by Mr. Mitchell relative to the sums spent in the special trust account for roadwork for certain units in the Bow Valley riding. L. Proudfoot asked for returns respecting distribution of hay in Acadia riding last year, and one from Mr. Proudfoot respecting the amounts spent in advertising in the years 1917, 1918, 1919, 1920 and 1921, up to the end of August.

In response to Donald Cameron, Hon. V. W. Smith, minister of railways and telephones, stated that the valuation of the Western General Electrical Co's plant at Red Deer, when purchased by the government in 1920, was made by the engineering department of the government telephones at that time. The valuation had been at $41,500, and the purchase price paid by the government on April 16, 1920, was $85,000.

To Mr. Proudfoot, Mr. Smith stated that twenty ballast cars had been purchased by the late government during 1921 for use on the A. & G. W. These had cost $2,848.94 each and were now valued at $400 to $500 each.

Farmer and Mortgage Companies.
Contrary to an erroneous impression which has become prevalent in the province concerning the amendments just passed to the land titles act affecting mortgages, these amendments do not give any unusual rights to mortgage companies or other mortgagees as against mortgagors. In fact, the amendments make no change in the situation as between a mortgagee and a mortgagor, but simply define the prior right of a mortgagee over other creditors.

Hon. J. E. Brownlee, attorney-general has issued the following statement in this connection. He states that this legislation is part of his program to assist the farmer to carry on at present, and that he has the assurance of the mortgage and loan companies that they will stand by the government in this effort. Mr. Brownlee's statement follows:

"My attention has been called to certain comments in the press as to the effect of the legislation recently passed by way of amendments to the Land Titles Act affecting mortgages. The impression seems to be that the effect of these amendments is to give mortgage companies rights which they have never heretofore had. This is entirely erroneous. Until the case of Hyde v. Chapin, heard by the Appellate Court of Alberta on January 26th, 1918, it was accepted by everyone that the attachment clause in our mortgages had the same effect as under the English mortgages and Mortgage Companies frequently exercised their powers under the attachment clause without question either from the mortgagor or other creditors. In the case of Hyde v. Chapin, however, a conflict arose between a mortgagee and the execution creditor as to which was entitled to the proceeds of a certain crop and the Court held for the first time, that on account of our Torrens System of Title a mortgagee did not acquire the same legal estate as under the real property laws in force in England and the older provinces. This decision did not affect the relationship between the Mortgagee and Mortgagor but did not allow other creditors to acquire a prior right to the crops grown on mortgaged lands to those of the mortgagee. The following clause is taken from the judgment of the Appeal Court: "No doubt the clause is valid as creating contractual rights between the parties and the mortgagee by virtue of the license given him may sustain if there is no legal impediment in his way." This clearly indicates that where a creditor intervenes the mortgagee may enforce the attachment clause as against the mortgagor.

As soon as this decision became public the Province of Saskatchewan enacted the same legislation as was passed at the recent Session.

The whole purpose of this legislation is to protect the mortgagee as against other creditors and in enacting the legislation the whole desire was to protect the owner of the land so that he would no longer be in the position that however willing and anxious he might be to pay his interest and protect his land against foreclosure, if he had other creditors they might by obtaining judgment and seizing the crop, prevent any payment being made to the Mortgage Company with the result that the Company had no other course open but foreclosure. It is expected that the effect of this legislation will be to greatly reduce the number of foreclosures in the province."

Testimony to the improved conditions which these amendments will create with respect to farmers and their relations with loan companies is given in one letter which Mr. Brownlee has received from a prominent Calgary law firm, in which the writer says: "The step which you have taken in putting through the amendments will have done much to re-establish confidence. Personally, I believe it will stop all foreclosures save in cases where the lands have been abandoned. The mortgage companies have never desired to put a farmer off his land but the law as previously existing gave loan companies no alternative when steps had to be taken for their protection. This new legislation helps both the farmer and the loan company. It will enable the farmer to protect his farm and not leave him helpless and at the mercy of other creditors, and with the assurance of a fair rental, the loan companies will have every inducement to carry the mortgage over bad times."

Regular Meeting
Town Council

A regular meeting of the Town Council was held in the council chamber on Monday, April 3rd.
Present: Mayor Fawcett, Councilors Morris, McNichol, Thewlis and Gardiner.
The Health Officer's report was read and on motion filed.
The time for receiving tenders for pasturage land was extended.
The matter of P. Burns re adjustment of taxes on three acres of land was left with Mayor Fawcett to settle.
Councillor Thewlis reported having arranged with Hospital Board to take care of T. Bissett.
On motion the council then adjourned.

Red Cross Notes

The announcement that a Junior Red Cross Hospital for children will be opened in Calgary in April has met with response from the Junior organization all over the province and they are all competing to get their quota of money raised for this purpose. The new institution will look after the cases of sick and crippled children which are taken in hand by the Junior. Over 65 of these cases, mostly very serious, have already been cared for by the Junior Red Cross.

The Stanton Branch of the Red Cross recently held a very successful auction of a fancy quilt, the proceeds of which were given towards the work.

The Russian Red Cross has been ordered from Moscow to carry on their appeal for funds in this country under some other name and not use the sign of the "Red Cross" is the information received in Canada from the International headquarters.

The following contributions have been received by the Red Cross fund for relief in rural districts:

CAPITAL GOSSIP AND PROVINCIAL NEWS

Important provisions in the new tax sale relief act, just passed by the legislature, which provide for the extension of time for redemption of certain lands from tax sales, are called to the attention of residents of the municipalities. Under this new act, the time for redemption of all lands included in plans registered in the Land Titles Office and all lands included in the corporate limits of towns and villages, has been extended until May 1st of this year. In this connection, the secretary-treasurer of a town or village or municipality is required to publish a notice to this effect twice in a publication, in the district, and to call attention to the fact that lists of these lands so in arrears can be procured from him.

In the case of farm lands which were included in the 1920 tax sale, the time for redemption is extended until next November 1st, and the procedure in this connection is outlined in the new act. In the case of cities, the same procedure applies as in the case of towns and villages.

Alfred Chard, freight traffic supervisor of the Provincial government, who has been studying the question of grain marketing gives it as his opinion that a great deal of the loss suffered by farmers in dockages on grain shipments could be saved by establishment of grain cleaning and drying facilities at prairie terminal points, such as Calgary and Edmonton for west-bound shipments, and Saskatoon for east-bound shipments. This would be a matter, he states, which would have to be taken up with the Dominion government. At present dockage amounts to anything from 2 to 8 or 10 per cent. on a car of grain. If proper facilities were established at terminal points on the prairies, the farmers would be saved freight on this dockage and would have the screenings immediately available for feeding purposes, close to home. This proposal is favorably viewed by Hon. Geo. Hoodley, Minister of Agriculture, and by Hon. V. W. Smith, Minister of Railways. It appears all the more urgent in view of the rapid development of the western route for grain from Alberta.

Representatives of the provincial agricultural department, including H. A. Craig, deputy minister, and S. G. Carlyle, Livestock Commissioner, were in attendance last week at the conference held under the auspices of the dominion department of agriculture at Saskatoon, of western livestock interests, to discuss livestock marketing conditions.

The annual spring shows will commence next week, the Calgary show being held from April 4 to 7 and the Edmonton show from April 11 to 14.

The Alberta government stallions, or 5 cents a ton will mean $275,000 additional, $45,000 will be derived from elevators, being an entirely new source of revenue, the new amusement tax will mean $84,000 more, increasing the tax of the fire and life insurance companies will raise $110,000, the tax on express companies has been raised to $500 annually in Edmonton and Calgary with a higher schedule for smaller centres in the province. This and the tax on telegraph companies will mean additional revenue of about $15,000. On provincial mileage the C. P. R. will this year pay $135 a mile instead of $100 as heretofore, this meaning $30,000 extra. A nominal fee of $10 yearly being a tax on produce merchants will produce $10,000 in revenue. Collections under the succession duties tax will be $25,000 more than before. Restaurants and liquor export concerns will pay $75,000 annually.

The first penalty under the new liquor act amendments, for illegal possession of liquor, was imposed in the Clydevale "Craig Master-piece" and the Percheron "Job," which were purchased some years ago, for breeding purposes, will be sold by public auction at the Edmonton Exhibition Grounds, during the spring show, on Thursday April 13, at 2 p.m.

The short course in agriculture held at Red Deer last week was an unqualified success, the farmers in attendance for the three days showing keen interest in all subjects by the range of subjects covered by the lecturers included soil cultivation, fodder crops, dairy cattle, bacon hogs, mutton sheep, draft horses, flowing matches, care of farm implements and other things. The speakers included H. A. Craig, Deputy Minister; S. G. Carlyle, Livestock Commissioner; Dean Howes, Faculty of Agriculture; Prof. MacGregor Smith, Prof. Dowell, Prof. Latimer, Alex. Galbraith, C. Marker, Dairy Commissioner and others. A. W. Foley presented a full line of motion picture demonstrations of many things pertaining to the farm.

The death of C. O. Wright, Member of the Legislature for Ribstone, took place Tuesday at midnight, shortly after the session had prorogued. He had been ill with pneumonia for less than a week. The funeral took place at Huggenhurst, Mr. Wright's home, the Premier and other Ministers and Members being in attendance. Mr. Wright's death now makes three vacancies in the Legislature, the other two being that of Whitford, formerly represented by A. S. Shandro, and that of Sedgwick, formerly represented by Hon. Chas. Stewart.

Meetings are now being held in the Lethbridge Northern Irrigation District, to consider plans for the listing of farm lands in that area and the colonization of the district.

A dispatch from Ottawa states that coal royalties received by the dominion government from school lands in Alberta and Saskatchewan, from 1906 to 1921, amounted to the sum of $183,819.66.

A mass meeting of citizens held in Edmonton last week passed resolutions expressing determination to co-operate with the Provincial Government in securing proper obedience to the liquor laws of the province, and congratulating the government and the members of the house in standing behind the Alberta Liquor Act. Support was pledged to E. S. Bishop, who is to be the official in charge of the administration of the act under Attorney-General Brownlee.

The first penalty under the new liquor act amendments, for illegal possession of liquor, was imposed in the Church and Sunday School. Her sickness and death seriously affected the work of the Young Ladies' Bible Class, but this is being reorganized under the direction of Mrs. Lockhead and it is planned to meet more effectively the social needs of the young people of the congregation.

The mid-week Bible Study Service has been fairly well attended during the year and the discussion at these meetings has been very interesting and stimulating.

The amounts contributed toward the current expenses of the church are well in hand and it is hoped that by a little special effort before the financial year ends, on April 30th, these obligations will have been fully met.

The purpose in holding the annual meeting a month earlier than usual was that the congregation might be fully informed on every phase of the church's work and also that by having the representatives of the congregation elected previous to the final meeting of the Official Board, the newly-elected officers of the church will be able to organize thoroughly for the carrying on of the work during the coming year.

The following were elected to the Official Board as representatives of the congregation during the coming church year: Messrs. J. Arthur, W. A. Charlton, J. T. Doney, J. L. Fawcett, J. Forster, A. F. Grady, H. L. Maltby and Mesdames Andrews, C. Brewster, Charlton, Doney, Fansett, Fawcett, Rose. Those, together with the Stewards to be elected by the Official Board and the presidents of the various organizations of the Church constitute its executive.

In the absence of Mr. Armstrong next Sunday Mr. Crowson will have charge of the services.

The choir, under the leadership of Mr. Doney has been making special preparation for the Easter Services and its work has shown a marked improvement. As the spirit of harmony and enthusiasm which characterized the annual gathering develops in every member and adherent of the church, the church may well look forward to a year of helpful service and progress.

German exchange is now 21 cents per hundred marks, that once were worth about $20. It seems that Germany's future now is in water—in its currency.

Edmonton last week, when one man was fined the minimum of $50 and costs. The act now provides an alternative of the minimum, of 10 days in jail, the maximum fine being $200 and the maximum alternative sentence being two months in jail. In Macleod last week, another offender under the act was fined $1,000.00 and costs for having liquor for sale.

According to a dispatch from Ottawa, the dominion government since 1905 has sold a total of 954,000 acres of school lands in the province of Alberta, realizing $13,204,000. This money is held in trust for the province.

Farmers in Nobleford district have launched a "Better Farming Club," according to news from that point.

Hon. V. W. Smith, Minister of Railways of the Provincial Government, announces that the government itself will do the construction work on the extensions this year to the E.D.B.C. and the Canada Central in the Peace River and Grande Prairie sections. Mr. Smith is confident the work can be done as cheaply by the government as by the C.P.R.

Premier Greenfield states that he is endeavoring to secure C. A. McGrath of Ottawa, who was chairman of the survey board, to take charge of the administration of the Southern Alberta Relief Act.

The new municipal hospital at Viking has been recently opened. There are four one-bed rooms and three two-bed rooms in the hospital, and it is one of the most modern of its kind. J. E. Kringen, chairman of the Hospital Board, has donated $200 towards equipment of a two-bed ward and Miss Drannan, the Superintendent, refunded $50 of her salary towards equipment for maternity ward.

The new Superannuation Bill passed by the Legislature will not come into effect until July 1st, when the four per cent. deductions from salaries of employees to provide the fund will commence. The government contributes four per cent. Consideration for past services of many employees who have been with the government for years, is given in the provision that the government will provide 1-50th of the average salary of such employee for the term he has been in service. In this way, many employees will already have a considerable sum to their credit in the superannuation fund. The retirement age for male employees is 65 and for female employees 60. Those who retire from government service before that time can withdraw the amounts they have paid in, with 5 per cent interest. Thus the scheme provides a savings account feature.

We have been informed that the dramatic entertainment to be given in the Town Hall on Friday, April 21st, by the School Girls and others, is under the supervision of Mrs. R. Seymour. When we state that Mrs. Seymour is training the girls the public is assured of a treat, as we all know from past entertainments given by Mrs. Seymour and her pupils' recitals are most successful and enjoyable. Don't forget the date and secure your ticket early.

Feeding The Russian Children

Pen pictures of the tragedy of starving Russians which have been drawn by eye-witnesses should spur to activity those contented Canadians who have not yet accepted their share of the responsibility in the saving of human lives. It is related that a father had brought three children to one of the relief centres and pleaded that they be fed. The answer was that only orphans could be saved; there was not food enough to go around.

"Then they shall be orphans," said the man and he abandoned them to the care of the committee.

In this case the possession of loving parents was really detrimental. Why should children who are not fortunate enough to be fatherless be allowed to suffer the pangs of starvation when there is grain in plenty in the store-houses of the world? It is because those who have been blessed with riches either do not know the real situation or are proof against appeals to the finer instincts of human kind.

No cause has appealed to the sympathy of the world with greater force than the "Save the Children Fund." There are no more deserving objects of charity than tender youths who are slowly wasting away for the want of the bare necessities of life, nothing upon which we can bestow a share of the blessings which are ours with more satisfaction to ourselves.

"It is more blessed to give than to receive," said the Master. What a splendid reward awaits those who give to the full measure of their ability in this righteous cause.

Send your subscriptions to Sir George Burn, treasurer of the "Save the Children Fund," Elgin Building, Ottawa, or through your church or other local organization or bank.

South Macleod
Irrigat'n Project
Activities

On Friday last Mr. L. C. Charlesworth, chairman of the Irrigation Council, Edmonton, with Secretary G. N. Houston, Lethbridge, and Mr. James Colley, also of Lethbridge, were in Macleod in consultation with the Trustee Board of the South Macleod Irrigation District. The first matter to be dealt with was the estimate of cost which must be submitted and approved before the by-law can be prepared which provides for the raising of funds for the construction work. There has been some delay in regard to this but the difficulties have been cleared away, and it is expected that the by-law which is prepared in Edmonton will be in the hands of the trustees in the course of a few days. After this the necessary advertising will be done and the by-law submitted to the land owners of the district for their approval.

The question of the colonization of the lands was also discussed, although nothing definite can be done in regard to this until after the voting on the by-law. It is understood, however, that listings will be asked for for all surplus lands and that the irrigation council will undertake the advertising and endeavor to bring purchasers for the lands. While no attempt will be made to set the price upon any person's land, yet it must be remembered that construction work on this project depends upon the good prospects of securing settlers for the surplus lands, and therefore the people who have such lands should be reasonable in the prices which they expect to obtain, otherwise they will defeat the whole object by keeping prospective purchasers away. It must also be remembered that the purchaser of land assumes the whole burden of taxation and that unless the price is made attractive we cannot expect that there will be buyers to assume such responsibilities.

From what we can gather there is already a movement northward from the United States and we may expect a fair share of the new comers to enquire into conditions here.

COMING EVENTS
FORESHADOWED

G. W. V. A. GRAND DANCE

The local branch of the G.W.V.A. are putting on a special dance on Easter Monday, April 17th. Special music has been engaged and supper will be served. Admission: gentlemen $1.00, ladies $1.00. Keep this date open—an enjoyable evening is assured. Dancing commences at 9 o'clock.

G.W.V.A. REGULAR DANCES

Commencing on Saturday evening April 8th the Macleod G.W.V.A. will resume their popular Saturday night dances. The income from these dances is devoted to relief work for returned men.

The School Girls' Dramatic Club is putting on a high class entertainment in the Town Hall on Friday, April 21, when one of the best entertainments will be staged that has been seen in Macleod for many moons.

The girls have been playing part of the forthcoming program at a number of the country school houses, and the wonderful accounts that have reached us of their splendid performance show that the girls can do some marvellous acting, and are indeed great entertainers. In addition to the play there will be a number of drills and dances by boys and girls, and several songs by some of our best local talent, including Constable Whitehead, the lady impersonator, who is a host in himself. The entertainment is being held under the auspices of the Agricultural Society. Look out for the printed program and don't forget the date, Friday, April 21st—first Friday after Easter.

Christ Church W.A. will hold a Tea and Sale of Home Cooking in the Parish Hall on Sat., April 22nd, at 3 p.m. 5-31

SETTLERS BY THOUSANDS
THIS SPRING

Toronto, April 1.—Western Canada will get thousands of farmers from the Central States this year, said Col. G. C. Porter, Winnipeg, newspaperman who is returning after a month's investigation on immigration prospects south of this line. He visited Minnesota, the Dakotas, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri and Illinois, and talked at length with Dominion immigration agents, railroad officials, bankers and farmers.

"I found," he said, "the conditions for the movement northward, better than at any time since 1910. Thirty-five per cent. of the United States farmers are tenants and the price of land has reached from three to five hundred dollars an acre in those great agricultural states from which the Canadian prairies have drawn so many farmers in other years. Owners of these high-priced lands must have from $15 to $18 per acre from their tenants if they are to get adequate interest on their investments. Wheat at $2.75 per bushel and corn at $1.00 would not net a tenant something, but not at present prices.

Tenants Must Move.

"Therefore, tenants have got to move. There is no cheap farm lands or homestead propositions to-day in the Western States. They have some money, farm equipment and household goods. At all the Dominion immigration offices I found from 40 to 50 letters of inquiry daily being received and an average of a dozen personal calls daily from farmers who want to go north. Many have already started and at the Chicago office of the Dominion immigration department I found 49 cars of settlers' effects ready to move over the line. The United States railways are making one fare round trip rates to Canada for the first time in 10 years, which will help enormously in bringing people in who want to investigate conditions.

Co-Operation Needed.

"I was impressed by what the agents told me was necessary to be done by the people of the prairie provinces if they want to encourage this stream of immigration. It must be co-operation. They must form clubs to meet these immigrants and display sympathetic interest in seeing them satisfactorily located on the land. The agents can get them north, but it is up to the Western Canadians to help make these newcomers satisfied after they get there."

LIVE STOCK MARKET IN FEBRUARY.

There was a marked decline in the average prices of live stock in Canada in the month of February this year compared with the quotations for the same month last year, but there appears to have been, judging from the returns of the Dominion Live Stock Branch, to have been somewhat of a rush to market. At the five principal markets in the country, namely, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Calgary and Edmonton, the receipts this year and last year, in February were respectively: Cattle, 34,832 and 31,786; Calves, 9,250 and 6,016; Hogs, 60,146 and 48,671 and Sheep, 18,473 and 14,446, the larger number in each case being for this year. The average decline this year in prices per hundred weight for February compared with the same month last year at the five markets was: Cattle, $1.93; Calves, $2.30; Hogs, $2.09, and Sheep, $1.65.

MAY AND DECEMBER

The bridal wreath blooms on the hedge.
The crimson roses nod and sway
And waft to me a fragrant pledge—
Tomorrow is my wedding day.
The hills are aerie, the sky is gray,
The raven croaks upon a tree;
The spirit droops within the clay—
The clock is striking twelve for me.

The torrent dashing o'er the ledge
Repeats its merry roundelay;
The bobolink sings from the sedge,
"Tomorrow is my wedding day!"
All flesh is grass, all things decay,
From north to south the swallows flee
And time, the tyrant, takes his pay—
The clock is striking twelve for me.

O'er yonder hill the last thin edge
Of golden sunlight fades away;
Comes faintly now the smithy's sledge—
Tomorrow is my wedding day!

The north star sheds its frigid ray
Upon a bleak and frozen sea;
My soul shrinks in sore dismay—
The clock is striking twelve for me!

(L'Envoi)
Come life and love and laughter gay,
Tomorrow is my wedding day.
What form stalks yonder on the lea?
The clock is striking twelve for me!

THE EMPRESS THEATRE CURRENT ATTRACTIONS

OVER ZEALOUS BARBER RUINS ACTOR IN "PUPPETS OF FATE"

Enthusiasm of an ambitious actor-barber, cost another actor playing a minor part in Metro's special production of "Puppets of Fate," which will be seen Monday and Tuesday at the Empress Theatre, a priceless growth of hair.

Viola Dana, the gifted little star of the production, had answered a query for advice from her co-worker by telling him to do nothing that would not be natural to him if it occurred in his own barber shop. The appreciative barber promised to do just that.

One of the big scenes of the production occurs in a New York barber shop. Bayard Veiller, director of productions at the West Coast studios, had insisted that a complete shop be erected on one of the enclosed stages—a shop that was perfect from the steaming towel containers to the most minute devices on the manicure tables.

The barber's big moment came with the appearance of Jackie Saunders, the beautiful screen player, who is assuming the role of manicurist for this production. Director Dallas Fitzgerald had instructed the barber that his eyes must be entirely for the manicurist. After one glance at the blonde Jackie, he found it easy to carry out Miss

Dana's accompanying instruction and "be natural."

The barber's victim, the possessor of a luxurious thatch, was seated in his chair when the camera began to click. The enthusiastic barber, with eyes on Jackie Saunders, just as he had been told, ran his clippers from the back of his hapless customer's neck over the top of his head and down over his brow. He might have continued on down and shorn off collar and tie, but for the violent protests of the owner of the mistreated head.

"I'll never look the same again," moaned the victim of the reckless hair cut, who is conscious of his value as an actor and careful of his appearance accordingly.

The barber looked guiltily toward Director Fitzgerald as the indignant possessor of the mutilated growth of hair was being led away to effect a settlement.

"I did it just like Miss Dana said it should be done," he said.

"And it's the most realistic thing I ever saw," grinned the director as he looked at the result of the barber's work.

The picture is from an original story by Donn Byrne. It was adapted for the screen by Ruth Ann Baldwin and Molly Parro.

THOMAS MEIGHAN IN SCREEN VERSION OF "CIVILIAN CLOTHES"

Star Has Role of Captain Who Turns
Butler to Re-Win His Snobbish
Wife

Thomas Meighan's new Paramount vehicle is "Civilian Clothes," produced by Hugh Ford from Thompson Buchanan's popular stage play of the same name. The picture will be shown at the Empress Theatre for two days commencing Friday next.

The story concerns an overseas captain who marries a pretty American society girl in France. She is attracted to him chiefly because he is so handsome in his uniform. Later, after she returns to America, comes news of his death. She has renewed her acquaintance with another admirer when her husband, very much alive, comes to her home. Disappointed at his unromantic appearance in civilian clothes, which show atrocious taste in his cut and color, she snubs him. The gallant ex-captain thereupon secures a job as butler in his wife's household with the avowed purpose of teaching her a lesson in democracy. The results are amusing in the extreme, and, of course, the story ends happily.

Mr. Meighan's supporting company includes Martha Mansfield, the beautiful heroine of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," and other screen notables.

BRYANT WASHBURN IS FINELY SUPPORTED IN "BURGLAR PROOF"

Lois Wilson, Grace Morse and Other
Capable Players in the Cast

Lois Wilson, Grace Morse, C. H. Geldart and Clarence Burton are well-known players who take part in the new Paramount comedy-drama, "Burglar Proof," starring Bryant Washburn which comes to the Empress Theatre for two days beginning Wednesday next. It tells of a man who, finding that the world hates a tightwad, decides to turn over a new leaf. The "turning" is replete with humor for the playgoers.

The story is finely developed and presents several highly amusing situations. The titles are witty and one of them explains what "Burglar Proof" means. In other words, the hero is so "tight," it would take a charge of nitro-glycerine to shake a dollar out of him! But Cupid shakes him from his money roll and doesn't use an explosive either.

The picture was directed by Major Maurice Campbell, from a story written by William Slaven McNutt. Tom Geraghty did the scenario and the photographer was C. Edgar Schoenbaum.

PRETTY MISS MANSFIELD

Former Follies Favorite Plays Role in "Civilian Clothes"

Martha Mansfield is another of those radiant beauties who secured their first dramatic experience in Mr. Ziegfeld's famous Follies and have lately been invading the motion picture field. Marion Davies, Mae Murray, and Justine Johnston belong in the same pulchritudinous gallery. Miss Mansfield's latest screen appearance is with Thomas Meighan in the latter's first starring vehicle, "Civilian Clothes," which is coming to the Empress Theatre next Friday and Saturday.

In "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," in which she supported John Barrymore, Miss Mansfield proved herself not only a singularly beautiful young woman, but an emotional actress of considerable ability. She shows further development in "Civilian Clothes." In the latter picture she has the role of a petted society girl who marries a handsome army captain while serving overseas with the Salvation Army. The sight of him later in atrocious looking civilian clothes is more than she can endure and she disowns him. However, he is not so easily cast aside, and several humorous developments lead to their reconciliation. The

Queer Combination Provides Fun in Bryant Washburn's Picture
"Burglar Proof"

When a man's a tightwad it's bad enough, but if his feet aren't mates—it's awful!

The combination affords a world of fun in "Burglar Proof" coming to the Empress Theatre next Wednesday and Thursday. Bryant Washburn, the star, finds his miserly tactics shaken at their foundations when he obeys a doctor's orders and learns to dance as a cure for his nerves. It is a Paramount picture directed by Maurice Campbell with scenario by Tom Geraghty.

Well-known players in the cast include Lois Wilson, Blanche Gray, Grace Morse, Emily Chichester, C. H. Geldart, Clarence Burton, Tom D. Bates and Hayward Mack.

A meeting of the farmers in the district was held in the school house on Wednesday afternoon. Mr. Joseph Horner occupied the chair, and called the meeting to order, explaining the objects for which the meeting had been called. There was a very good turnout, taking into consideration the heavy state of the prairie trail. Mr. Shields, M.L.A., was present and imparted a great deal of valuable information, especially along the lines of irrigation. The question of how best to fight the grasshopper plague which threatens was fully gone into. It was finally decided to divide the school district into four parts and the following gentlemen were appointed to see that the work as laid down is thoroughly performed: Jesse Johnson and J. Gemil, the south-east corner; Wm. Shields, the south-west corner; S. W. Harris and J. Horner, the north-west corner; W. Day and R. Lemere, the north-east corner. It will be the duty of these men to scout around, find out the breeding grounds of the hopper, notify owners what to do and how to do it, see that land owned or controlled by loan companies or speculators receives attention, and if necessary to engage men to put out poison on all vacant lands whose owners neglect their duty in the matter. The cost of the poisoned bran will be borne equally between the province and the owner or tenant.

The colonization of irrigated lands came in for considerable discussion. It was felt that to attract settlers the land must be made attractive in price as the buyers, in addition to the cost of the land will also be called upon to assume the bonded indebtedness on same. At this stage no definite figure per acre can even be suggested but the trend of the meeting seemed to be that land owners are prepared to meet the incoming people with the proper spirit of fairness and will do all in their power to encourage them to take up land in this district.

The regular meeting of the Ladies' Aid did not materialize the state of the roads preventing.

Capt. Guest, secretary of the British Air Ministry, says that the next war will be fought in the air. There will be a good many battles fought before then with air.

Beckett, the English prize fighter, is reported to have an attack of influenza. Well, it is neither as dangerous nor as painful as an attack of Dempsey.

Ewelme News

Mrs. T. E. Murphy has been visiting her sister, Mrs. Doyle, at Waterton.

Mr. E. Nathe is back on the old place. We are glad to see him; we have always felt sorry to see the old place neglected, at one time it was the pride of the district.

A number of farmers are contemplating using the bank silo. The bank silo solves the high cost and we cannot see why it would not be just as good as a concrete one. Anyway, we shall soon prove it.

We are sorry to say that quite a number in this district are suffering from an attack of influenza. Mr. W. Collinson has just got over a severe attack, Mr. and Mrs. Bailey have both had bad attacks and we have just learned that Mr. Bennett is in bed suffering from the loathsome disease.

It has been brought to our notice that some farmers of the south are contemplating a move north; and that the central of the U.F.A. is acting as advisors and locators. This looks very well on paper, but we would remind those who are disposed to accept the rather enticing offers, that about fifteen years ago there was a public subscription taken up right in this district to assist some of the settlers up north who were starving through conditions brought about by excessive rains and frosts. There is an old saying, 'Don't jump out of the frying pan into the fire.'

It is said that the Allies will provide the Armenians with a "spiritual home." This is no improvement on the Turks, who provided as many as possible with spiritual homes.

THE SPIRIT OF SPRING

A fairy came with a magic wand
And touched the banks of snow,
They quickly melted, the hills around,
And the soft, south winds did blow.

The brooks a gleeful song did make
As they hurried on their way,
As if to say, "Of pleasure take
A plenty while you may."

The violets peeped from 'neath the sod
The warm sunshine had kissed,
Their faces lifted up to God;
'Twere saddening to have missed

The fragrance of one tiny bloom.
And so it is in life,
Can we but keep our hearts attuned
To pleasures that are rife

We ne'er need hunger for the past,
Or joys that might have been;
We have the joys that ever last,
The blessing sent by Him.

MACLEOD STOCKMEN'S ASS'N

A meeting of the farmers of the Macleod district was held on Thursday last which was attended by about forty summer pasture farmers. The need of summer pasture for stock has been keenly felt and of late years the question has become very acute. The Farm Survey Board recently appointed by the provincial government of this Province of Alberta recommended in their report the granting of grazing leases to farmers adjacent to the Indian Reserves to be used as a community pasture. The meeting resolved itself into an association under the name of The Macleod Stockmen's Association and a request was forwarded to the Minister of the Interior at Ottawa for the granting of such leases. Details as to charges per head, fencing and range riding were left in abeyance as it was felt that the immediate question is to ascertain if such leases would be obtainable, and the terms of same. The following officers were elected: P. H. Tolley, President; A. V. Harris, Vice-President; A. R. McFadden, Secretary-Treasurer; and a committee of four, consisting of R. B. McNab, T. C. Orr, T. Worthington and A. Weaver. Further procedure is delayed awaiting the reply from Ottawa.

OLD VIOLINS HAVE NEVER BEEN EQUALLED

In a disquisition on violins and their makers, a writer in the New York Times quotes an American authority to the effect that the violins of Stradivarius remain unequalled, and probably will never again be equalled. When a painter comes along who will outdo Michael Angelo and Raphael, then they will concede the likelihood of the Stradivarius singing its swan song. Yet not long ago it was announced that in Germany an inventor had turned up who, by a trifling attachment, could make the cheapest violin sound like one of the old masters. We recall that at the time this was said to be merely a rediscovery, since an ingenious American had done the same thing a generation earlier, and had received testimonials from famous players. From the fact that this device did not drive the good violins out of the market, we infer that, after all, there must have been some trifling, yet ruinous, defect in it. Yet a few weeks ago at a test of modern and old violins, before a company of students and experts at the Conservatoire, Paris, the verdict went to the moderns. The Stradivarius was only third, receiving 90 fewer votes than the winner.

Strad. Worth $50,000.

Nevertheless, if one has an undamaged Strad., he can get at least $10,000 for it. A New York dealer has an order to buy in Europe a particular Stradivarius and is commissioned to pay as much as $50,000. The cheapest instrument turned out by the great Cremona maker will bring from $7,000 to $8,000. Since the average "commercial" violin of modern make is worth only $50, it would appear that Stradivarius has a considerable edge upon his rivals. Nor is it merely the name that connoisseurs are paying for. There are in existence older violins than those of Stradivarius, but none of them commands such a high price. The instruments of some of his pupils bring thousands of dollars, but the only maker whom the critic will mention in the same breath with Stradivarius is Guarneri, who was his contemporary and rival, and who was, indeed, more highly esteemed at the time. It seems probable that some of the supreme excellence of the violins made by these old creators was due to the keen rivalry between them. Each was so great that the other had to perform a marvel to surpass him. Posterity has awarded the laurel to Stradivarius.

Why Are They Great?

There have been various theories to explain the excellence of the violins made in Italy in the late sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. One reason, no doubt, was that the making of violins was an important industry. There was competition among hundreds of makers, and the musical intelligence of the country and the time was keen. Italians were as much interested in art and music then as Canadians are interested in hockey and the movies now. It is generally believed that one of the chief reasons for the supremacy of the seventeenth century violins of Italy was the quality and preparation of the wood used. Soft elastic pine was used for the belly, cross-grained sycamore or maple for the back, both being carved from the solid block. There were slight peculiarities of structure in the seventy pieces of wood out of which the violin was made, and the nicest calculations were made as to the dimensions, the position and the shape of the sound holes.

The Old Varnish.

Some have thought that the varnish used on the violins had as much to do with their excellence, as the mixing of colors had to do with the marvels of the old master painters. The old varnish, it is contended, preserved the elasticity of the wood. So far as is known, the old varnish was merely a combination of oil and pure gum, but there is a difference of opinion as to the correct proportions. Nowadays spirit and gum lac are used, and this preparation has the great advantage of drying more quickly, an advantage at which, we have no doubt, old Stradivarius would have smiled. An authority on the subject says that the varnish "should nourish the fibres without dissimulating their virtue and soften the tones without deadening them." He contends, nevertheless, that the beauty and value of the Cremona violins are in their construction.

Genius.

We understand this to mean that the explanation lies in the fact that Stradivarius and Guarneri were geniuses. They were really creators taking as much joy and pains in their work as a poet or painter would take. It is said that the first violin made by Stradivarius was a marvel, and that he merely proceeded from excellence to excellence by steady, almost imperceptible, stages. There were no sudden departures or flashes of genius to be detected. It has been said that he was the only man who could make two violins that sounded exactly alike. He made hundreds, among which no expert could distinguish. We infer, too, that he did not just make a violin when one was ordered, but that he kept on making them whether sales were good or bad. Indeed, when he died there remained ninety unsold violins in his workshop, the result of the greater vogue that Guarneri had at the time.

EQUINOCTIAL.

"About this time" (the Almanac instructs, presages and informs) "Look out for Equinoctial storms." I'm looking out. The sky is black; The birds are sorry they are back; The snowdrops fly in busy swarms; My spring attire but little warms My shrinking figure. Alas! Alack! Then shines the sun, and it is hot; Then blows the wind and it is not. Then fall rain, sleet, and everything. The birds they sing, the buds they blow. My perspiration melts the snow—I write a sonnet to the Spring!—Ted Robinson, in Cleveland Plaindealer.

Loyalty Basis of All Civilization

Every Citizen Owes Moral and Legal Obligation to His Government.

SAME IN COMMUNITY LIFE

People Have Duty to Their Home Town Which is No Less Binding Because It is Fixed by Law.

(Copyrighted.)

Loyalty is the foundation upon which the whole structure of civilization rests. Loyalty to one's country, loyalty to one's state, loyalty to one's city, loyalty to one's business associates, loyalty to one's friends! Loyalty is essential to the ordinary progress of the world. Without it the world must be chaos.

There would be no stable government in the world were it not for the loyalty of the people to their government. There would be no successful business enterprise on the face of the globe were it not for the loyalty of the men and women who are connected with it. No church could exist for a month were it not for the loyalty of its members. The sacredness of the home would be a myth were it not for the loyalty of the members of the family group.

The loyalty of a people to its government is based partly upon sentiment and partly upon the recognition of an obligation that a people owes to its government. A people that has the benefit of good government owes a duty to that government. Those who do not recognize this duty and perform it voluntarily are compelled by law to do so. The man or woman who is protected by the government in the pursuit of life and happiness, must contribute in money and service toward the support of the government. The man or woman who, under the protection of his government which preserves law and order, is able to accumulate property, must pay taxes on that property to help maintain the government which has protected him or her, in time of war the government has the right to call upon its citizens to take up arms in its defence.

Loyalty Moral Obligation.

In governmental affairs these things are regulated by law, and the man who receives the benefit of orderly government is required to fulfill the obligation which that entails, but in the ordinary affairs of life, loyalty is a moral rather than a legal obligation. There are laws which prevent a man from stealing from his employer or his business associates, but there is no law that requires him to be loyal to them. The success of a business institution, however, depends more upon the loyalty of its employees than upon the laws which prevent them from stealing its money. Likewise the stability of a government depends more upon the loyalty of its people than upon the laws which compel them to fulfill their obligation to the government.

It is equally true that the prosperity and growth of every individual community is dependent upon the loyalty of the people who live in it. Every citizen owes an obligation to his community, and the obligation is a moral as well as a legal one. The good citizen pays his taxes cheerfully and willingly. He serves upon the juries which administer the laws of the community. He fulfills every legal obligation that is imposed upon him by the government, but there is a moral obligation which is of still greater importance to the community. This moral obligation consists in doing everything that is in his power to promote the prosperity and happiness of his community. The man who is enabled to make his living in any community is under a moral obligation to spend his money in such a way as to help his community.

Prosperity Worth Protecting.

Anything worth having is worth protecting, and if the prosperity of a community is worth anything to the people living in it it is worth protecting. If the chance for a man to earn a good living, to live well, to give his children a good education, is worth anything, it is worth protecting.

There is just one way to protect the prosperity of a community, and that is to keep the community from being drained of its cash—working capital. The only way to do that is for the people of the community to keep their money at home. Every time the citizen of a community sends money away from home to a mail order house instead of spending it in his home stores he is disloyal to his community. It is disloyalty to the merchants only indirectly. It is disloyalty to the community which shows its merchants are only a small but a very important part.

This is the moral obligation that every citizen owes to his community, just as the payment of taxes and the loyal support of his government are his legal obligations. Disloyalty of a large body of the citizens spells disaster to any government and disloyalty of any large part of the people to their community is followed inevitably by the downfall of the community. Self-interest, if nothing else, should convince every citizen of the advisability of fulfilling his moral obligation to his community.

The United States does not contain as many people as China, but it is announced that it has more opium, in which respect it more or less proudly leads the world.

A German specialist has been summoned to treat Lenin, and one rather hopes that he is of monarchical leanings.

If You Trade Out of Town, and I Trade Out of Town WHAT WILL BECOME OF OUR TOWN?

THE MACLEOD TIMES "TRADE AT HOME" CAMPAIGN

READ THE "TRADE AT HOME" ARTICLE ON THIS PAGE CAREFULLY

IT MAY PRESENT SOMETHING YOU HAVEN'T THOUGHT OF BEFORE. PATRONIZE THE PEOPLE WHOSE ADVERTISEMENTS ARE HERE. THEY ARE NEIGHBORS AND WILL TREAT YOU RIGHT. THE MONEY YOU SPEND WITH THEM STAYS IN CIRCULATION IN YOUR DISTRICT.

YOU SHOULD BE AS LOYAL TO YOUR COMMUNITY AS TO YOUR NAME.

(Copyright)

The Macleod concerns listed here, conscious of the fact that thousands of dollars are being sent out of this territory for merchandise that can be bought at home, have launched a campaign in the hope that it will create a stronger feeling of community interest—a sentiment most vital for the prosperity of the entire community. In bold type you therefore read the slogan that they propose to popularize "TRADE IN YOUR HOME TOWN."

The time for consideration of this question could not be more opportune than the present. "Preparedness," the watchword of Canada, should begin at home and can be exemplified in no more far-reaching manner than by real co-operation in this vitally important "TRADE AT HOME" movement. It is a thought that should be taken to heart and given consideration by every person who earns their living in, or owes their success to, this community.

This campaign is launched in the firm belief that the people of this community will follow the dictates of their good sense, and bring the "TRADE AT HOME CAMPAIGN" to an actuality that will be of vast benefit to the entire territory.

This movement is no selfish propaganda of these progressive concerns who have combined in co-operative community appeal. They urge that you read the brief message they will give you each week through the columns of The Times.

The firm resolve to "TRADE AT HOME" will not only help the retail merchants, but the manufacturer and jobber, the farmers adjacent to our town, and it will also help in every line of business. It will either directly or indirectly benefit every individual of this section.

THE TOURIST TRAFFIC

The tourist traffic will soon be here, is Macleod, which is on the tourist route, ready to receive the visitors? If not, then one of the very first things we should look into is the matter of a suitable camping ground, as not one party in ten will put up at an hotel if it can be avoided.

The influx of visitors begins about the end of June and continues well into the fall. A most necessary part of the duty of every town on the line of the traffic is the providing of a suitable camping place as near the centre of the community as possible. Then comes the question of food, water, light and sanitary arrangements. These privileges are usually provided free of charge, the cost of which is but a small item compared to the benefits derived by the strangers passing through.

It has been found that each party will spend from $35 to $50 while in camp. To one who has never been through the mill it is surprising how much cash changes hands in one way and another.

Faucets for supplying drinking water to the travellers, one or two brick ovens, toilet privileges, firewood and light is about all that is required. Other towns in Alberta are awakening to the fact that the summer visitors will soon be on the move, and already are preparing to receive them with open arms. Macleod being the most important point on the route travelled by these people, as well as being the centre of the irrigation country to be, must be up and doing. The attention of the town council is directed to this very important matter.

THE FUTURE OF THE RHINE

The withdrawal of the American forces on the Rhine and the rapid evolution of British sentiment toward a willingness to forgo the British share of the reparation payments for the sake of a complete resumption of trade relations which, in time, must lead to a similar withdrawal of British troops bring up sharply the question of the future status of the occupied German territory. That France would ultimately be left alone to guard the Rhine was frequently forecast even before the Versailles Treaty was signed, and now that this appears to be coming true, what is France to do after the fifteen-year period has expired?

On this point French sentiment is strongly divided. Opinions range from that of the extreme Nationalists, who, in the past, have advocated that the Rhine should be made the permanent frontier between Gaul and Germany, as it was in Julius Caesar's time, to that of the extreme Socialists, who have no hope for a future peace in Europe until France and Germany become reconciled on a basis of mutual consent. The Nationalists insist that until the German "Reich" is confined to the east of the river, Paris will ever be in danger of another siege or bombardment. French liberal opinion, on the contrary, is inclined to follow President Wilson's maxim of "self-determination," holding ethical boundaries more important than geographic or strategic ones. "Should not the first principle of this (French Rhine) policy be to respect the sentiment of those people (of the Rhineland)?" asks Rene Lauret, a French writer in La Revue de Geneve, as quoted in The Living Age.

At the Paris peace conference Marshal Foch advocated that the Rhine ought to be made the military frontier, and it was to avert any such step that the British and American delegates signed an agreement to intervene at once should Germany ever make another unprovoked attack. This agreement was not ratified by the American Senate, and a substitute dual treaty between France and Great Britain is still a subject of discussion. This leaves France in a serious predicament. She must stay heavily armed.

Since the American Senate rejected the Versailles Treaty, M. Clemenceau and his friends have been bitterly attacked for their failure to follow at least Marshal Foch's advice with regard to the Rhine instead of trusting to British and American intervention, but Andre Tardieu, one of the French peace commissioners, has asserted that, under the Versailles Treaty, France has the right to remain on the Rhine until the reparation provisions have been fulfilled, which, as they now stand, will mean forever. This interpretation is not shared by all Frenchmen. Premier Poincare, who has been a sharp critic of M. Clemenceau's Rhine policy, has always favored serious and permanent "guarantees," and put himself on record to that effect before the peace treaty was drawn.

In the meantime the French Nationalists, for whom Maurice Barres, the gifted Academician, is the most eminent literary spokesman, continue their campaign for what they call a "deprussianization" of the Rhine country. They wish to create among the native population a spontaneous preference for French culture, so that if the Rhine is to be neither a political nor a military frontier, it will be at least a moral one. "France wishes to chain the spirit of force cultivated there by Prussia," writes M. Barres in reply to M. Lauret, "and to unchain the fettered native spirit of the country. She does not wish the Rhineland to be either French or Prussian, but Rhenish." But later, in the same article, he also writes: "In our age the only effective guarantees are economic. We must have on the Rhine economic guarantees that are effective and certain—it is a question of life and death for us to hold on the Rhine practical and effective guarantees that assure us a zone of safety and the pacification of Germany." Bluntly speaking, this means a revival of the idea of a Rhenish buffer state within the French customs union, which the French proposed to the peace conference.

As harbingers of French culture and humanity, as opposed to the Prussian theory of force, the French officials and militarists are not ideally equipped. Even M. Lauret, representing the French liberal viewpoint, writes: "Why does not the genius of France present herself there, not as a mistress, not seeking to exclude her rivals, but merely eager to be known and to know others?"

LUXURIOUS EXPLORATION

Ronald Amundsen is preparing for five years of luxury in the vicinity of the north pole. In a ship that is both staunch and snug he will drift with the ice pack, and he is confident that this drift will carry him across the top of the world. Though he plans to be absent from civilization only five years, his ship will carry ample provisions for seven years. It will carry a powerful radio apparatus which will enable the party to be in constant communication with the rest of the world. Two aeroplanes will provide for extensive side trips in all directions from the ice-bound ship, and it is expected make certain the attainment of the pole even though the drift may not carry the ship directly to this desired culmination. There are, of course, many risks incidental to such an enterprise, but on the whole it has the appearance of a very enjoyable five years.

Amundsen's immediate predecessor in Arctic work followed vastly different plans. Vilhjalmur Stefansson had a theory that Arctic explorers can easily live off the land that it is needlessly burdensome to carry food or fuel or anything else except clothing and scientific instruments. He spent five years in his explorations, always traveling light, and living comfortably. Seals, bears, caribou and other animals were abundant, and the food problem was never vexing; while animal fats and oils supplied satisfactory fuel. Snow houses, built after the manner of the Eskimos, offered warm shelter with the thermometer half a hundred degrees below zero. It was a favorite undertaking of Stefansson's to start with only two or three companions on a 500 or 700-mile "hike" across the ice of the open sea in the direction of some known or suspected land. So pleasing did the intrepid theorist find this unencumbered and care-free rambling that he named his story "The Friendly Arctic." Beyond the shadow of a doubt Stefansson proved his contention that it is possible to live almost indefinitely in the Arctic without supplies and without communication.

No one can fail to admire the courage of Stefansson or to admit the cogency of his proofs that the Arctic is "friendly" to men of valor and resourcefulness. Nevertheless the great majority will probably admit a preference for the Amundsen method of attack. It may be very romantic to roam confidently for years in the remote isolation of the eternal ice, but it seems even more romantic to advance through these regions in a comfortable home, with a variety of food, and with many of the luxuries of civilization. To stand on the pole and talk casually with friends in New York or Christiania must appeal strongly to the imagination.

Stefansson proved that Arctic exploration can be made successful with none of the traditional burdens. It is Amundsen's task to prove that Arctic exploration can be equally successful with all the traditional burdens and a great many more.

Plesiosaurs, megatherium, or pelyodon? These are the words which, no doubt, the members of the expedition organized to search for the strange creature reported in an Andean lake will murmur to themselves as they plunge into the Patagonian jungle. It is a romantic thought. One imagines their firm, set countenance as they leave civilization behind, resolved to put a plesiosaurs, snare a megatherium, bag a glydon, or not return at all. What matter if the aquatic monster so often reported prove non-existent? As long as little boys hunt red fairy books and little boys hunt redskins, certain of their elders will find romance in newspaper tales of antediluvian creatures with polysyllabic names.

According to reports, electricity has conquered at least one-third of the cultivated area of Sweden, and if the ratio of present installations continue it will be but a matter of a few years before the entire country is run by electricity. While one may sigh for the picturesque qualities of the old type of farming, one must not forget that the use of electricity is quite as wonderful and picturesque. This harnessing of a natural force to forward the comfort of man is a miracle that is taken too much for granted in this modern age. It is a marvelous thing to contemplate, and one of the chief splendors of the remarkable modern life we lead.

And now a young man preparing for Yale elopes with a seventeen-year-old chorus girl. The dispatch does not state whether he now considers himself thoroughly prepared.

BUSINESS IS GOOD

The Farmer sells a load of wheat, And all the world grows fair and sweet;

He hums a couple of cheerful tunes, And pays the Grocer for his prunes.

The Grocer, who has had the blues, Now buys his wife a pair of shoes.

That ten the Shoeman thinks God-gent and runs and pays it on the rent.

Next day the Rent Man hands the bill To Doctor Carver for a pill.

And Doctor Carver tells his Frau That business is improving now.

And cheers her up and says: "My dear, You've been quite feeble for a year.

I'm thinking you should take a rest, You'd better take a trip out West."

And in a couple days the Frau Is on the farm of Joshua Howe.

She pays her board to Farmer Howe, Who takes the bill and says, "I saw."

Here's something that just can't be beat This bill's the one I got for wheat."

He hums a couple of cheerful tunes, And goes and buys a lot more prunes.

EASTER SUGGESTIONS.

Why should the sunlight on Easter Shine with such radiance bright? Christ, Sun of Righteousness, rising, Scatters earth's darkness and night.

Why should the bells peal on Easter Anthems of gladness and cheer? Jesus, o'er death now triumphant, Banishes sadness and fear.

Why should the flowers of Easter Blossom with fragrance so rare? Life from the tomb, is their message—We, too, this glory may share.

Should not, then, all God's creation Join His due praises to sing? Victor o'er death, He now liveth—Crown Him in gladness as King.

1922 ALBERTA DIRECTORY ISSUED BY WRIGLEY DIRECTORIES, LTD., CALGARY, LISTS 2136 PLACES.

Wrigley's Alberta Directory for 1922 has been issued, and forms an excellent book of reference of the Province.

The directory proper covers 2136 cities, towns, villages and settlements, treated alphabetically, with a description giving location in section, township, range, Federal and Provincial Electoral districts, Land and Judicial Districts, also Municipality Number, population, railroad or nearest station, express, telegraph, telephone and banking point, value of lands, crop averages, etc.

The classified business directory indexes the business interests of the Province under some 600 headings, and is excellent for quick reference.

In addition to these main sections, there is an introductory having to do with the early history, resources and development of Alberta. Among the wide variety of subjects treated, are included area and surface, agricultural resources, with statistical tables and articles on mixed farming, dry farming, irrigation, crops, live stock, dairying, wool production, co-operative organizations, minerals, timber, game and fisheries, education, schools, university, highways, bridges, ferries, the scope of the municipal and industrial development, and also transportation facilities are fully discussed. Half-tones and charts are used to illustrate this excellent and comprehensive treatise.

Follows an outline of the government of the province, and its judicial system. Government departments and officials are listed, indexing the scope and personnel of all departments.

Gleaned from the directory are the following interesting figures:

Alberta is 750 miles long by from 200 to 450 wide.

Alberta has an area of 255,585 square miles equal to Montana, North Dakota and Minnesota. Twice the area of Great Britain and Ireland.

Alberta has 86,084 farms under cultivation.

Alberta produced in 1921, wheat 59,947,760 bushels; oats, 92,156,655 bushels; barley, 12,642,249 bushels; flax, 136,483 bushels; rye, 3,198,758 bushels. In 1920, butter 11,821,29 lbs; cheese, 398,750 lbs.

Alberta has produced a yield of 54,330 bushels of wheat from one 1000-acre tract, while in the Peace River District in 1921, 260,000 acres sown yielded 6,682,500 bushels.

CEREAL FOODS.

By Polly Peck

When one learns, in actual figures, how important a part cereals play in the average dietary—wheat and wheat products alone supplying about 25 per cent of the total fuel required to run the human machine—one cannot but be interested in them and their preparation. It is unfortunate that the best proteins the building materials—in the wheat are removed from the white flour as generally used, but it has been found by experiments that, through supplementing the protein from white flour by the better protein from milk, in the proportion of two-thirds to one-third, normal growth is secured. If, therefore, a child gets at least a pint of milk a day, no fear need be felt over the use of white bread. And it is to the growing child, constantly building new cells in his body, that the protein is more important.

One still hears people scoff at the ideal of cooking oatmeal a long time and some people declare they don't like the taste of it, when cooked overnight. The same people, incidentally, frequently stir their porridge until it is a gluey mass. I know, myself, of delicate children who absolutely could not digest oatmeal porridge cooked three quarters of an hour, but who, under doctor's orders, were given porridge cooked four hours and made most satisfactory progress on the diet. Most interesting experiments have been made showing the digestibility and the nutritive value of oatmeal cooked for varying periods. After 20 minutes cooking there was found considerably less than one per cent of soluble protein, or building material; after two hours, over one and a half per cent and after eight hours nearly three and a half per cent. It was also found that, in the porridge cooked 20 minutes, about 77 per cent of the protein was digested and in that cooked 8 hours, about 82 per cent. This works out, roughly, to about four times as much protein from the porridge cooked eight hours.

Digestibility on the whole is represented by the soluble solids, which, in raw oatmeal, are approximately 8 per cent; in that cooked 20 minutes, 16 per cent; two hours 19 per cent; five hours 30 per cent and eight hours 34 1-2 per cent.

In my household the old-fashioned oatmeal is much preferred to rolled oats, but, in cooking either, I use the fireless cooker and put it over the night before. After once the meal is thoroughly stirred into the salted and boiling water it is never stirred again and so each flake or grain, while thoroughly cooked, stands out distinctly and the porridge could not possibly be described by the unappetizing American appellation "mush." If I had to live in the United States and call it "mush" I'm sure I should never summon up any appetite for porridge. I cook the porridge for about ten minutes before putting it into the fireless cooker and it stays there until morning when I transfer it to a double boiler, there to reheat. There is always enough for another morning as well.

Wheatlet, or germ meal, and most other cereals I prepare in the same way. All of them I buy in bulk and find them much cheaper, and, if bought from a flour and feed store or a large place where they sell quantities, very satisfactory.

All About Tree Holes—Whitey The Weasel.

(By Bertha E. Green.)

Whoever it was suddenly let go of Whitey's foot, and the weasel almost fell off the branch.

Whitey had just recovered his balance, when a head popped out through the little tree-hole, and a sharp voice spoke:

"So ho! Mr. Weasel. You're at your thieving tricks again. I hope this teaches you to keep out of the home of Thomas B. Tit."

Dick knew who it was as soon as he saw the head pop out of the hole. It was Tommy, the Blue Tit, as spunky and saucy a bird as any who made their home in the Hollis' woods.

The weasel crept quietly down the tree, never once answering the angry words that the birds called after him.

"Words don't hurt much," said the weasel, "but my toes do."

He limped slowly beside Dick until they came to a hollow stump. Here was another tree-hole.

It was not much more than a crack in the rotten wood, but it was a tree-hole just the same.

The weasel rapped smartly on the stump, and at once Dick saw a face appear at the opening. It was a large spider, who wore a rough coat of black and yellow hair.

"Oh, Mr. Hunter," began Whitey, "do you know of any fine big tree-holes?"

"Of course," replied the spider, "there is a big one in the second tree from this."

Then, when the weasel was not looking, Hunter, the spider winked at Dick.

Hunter, the spider, had told Whitey the Weasel, of a new tree-hole. Hunter had also winked at Dick when Whitey's back was turned. So, when the weasel and Dick walked over to where the new tree-hole was supposed to be, Dick was thinking:

"Whatever did the spider wink at me for?"

He forgot about the spider right away, and so did Whitey, for just then they both saw the tree-hole. It was a grand tree-hole, high up in the side of an elm, and Whitey forgot everything about his sore toes, in his curiosity to see inside.

Dick watched Whitey climb carefully, higher and higher, up the broad tree-trunk, until he stood at last at the edge of the hole. The weasel paused a moment to wave a paw at Dick, then turned and disappeared into the darkness of the tree-hole.

It seemed a long time to Dick before there was either sight or sound of Whitey's return. But, after a while, Dick heard the weasel's squeaky voice: "Oh, I didn't mean to do anything, Mr. Hoo-hoo. I just came in to have a little look around."

Then Dick heard another voice, harsher than Whitey's, reply:

"Taking a look around to see if there were any eggs in this tree-hole, eh?"

Just then Dick saw the speaker. A big, brown owl appeared in the doorway of the tree-hole. His brown features were marked with darker brown and black, with a little white on his shoulders.

Everyday Religion

THE HERITAGE OF FAITH.

(Dr. Thurlow Fraser.)

A good many years ago in a certain Canadian city, there were five boys of about the same age. They were all first cousins, the sons of five brothers and sisters. Three of them were the sons of wealthy parents, of the new rich class. Two were the sons of comparatively poor people. Of these two one is to-day a successful business man and a member of parliament. The other is even more successful as a professional man. The other three cousins are all failures both from the material and moral standpoint.

"That is easy," you will say, "Those fellows had too much money. They did not have to earn it themselves, and did not know the value of it. Their fathers grubbed and scraped to give them a chance, and they did not know enough to take the chance when they got it."

"Yes, that is true. They got their money so easy that they did not know the value of it. But what about the moral side of it? Why did they break down morally?"

"Same thing," you say. "Their fathers gave them too much money to spend, and they threw it away on gambling, wine and fast women, and all the rest that goes with these."

"Yes, that is perfectly true, too. That is just what they did. These are the rocks on which every one of those three wealthy young men wrecked their lives. But there is another element of which you have not yet taken account. It is this. In all three of those wealthy homes religion was only a name. It was outwardly professed but not lived. In one of the poorer homes the mother was deeply and truly religious and in the other both father and mother set the example of earnest and devout lives. It was not their poverty, but their high ideals which laid the foundation of the characters and success of their children."

Some of us who have but little means feel keenly enough the difference between what we are able to offer our children, and what others who have abundant means are able to give. How often do we see one brother who has struck it rich, often by little more than accident, able to give his family everything which the schools and colleges can bestow, and leave them with abundance to live in comfort all their days. Another brother, just as worthy, upon whom fortune has not smiled, has nothing to give his children but hard work from the very first day that they are able to earn their bread. The two families are of the same blood and kin, and one is just as worthy of the good things of life as the other. Those who belong to the class who have little often feel keenly the injustice of the division of things, especially when it hits their children.

Yet it is not so unjust or unfair as at first sight it seems. There are compensations which balance up the account. It is generally in the homes where there is not so much of wealth and luxury that there is the wealth of faith. For some reason or other people who prosper greatly and rapidly are very apt to feel that they do not need God, and in the enjoyment of the multitude of their possessions, forget the God who was with them in the day of small things. Consequently it is often the case that their money wealth is all that they have to leave their children.

The other class may not have much to leave their families in worldly gear. But, strange as it may seem to material wisdom, it is out of just such homes that there comes much the larger number of those who have profoundly affected their fellow-men for good, and have left a noble memory to the world. It is because a heritage of faith is the richest fortune any parents can leave a family. You may not have much of this world's goods to leave. But this you can bequeath, a heritage of character, a heritage of ideals, a memory which your children will be proud of; an inspiration to live clean, honest fearless lives in the face of God and of their fellow-men. That is the guarantee of their enduring success. It is a great thing to live that our children may be always proud to acknowledge their father and mother; and to see in their father and mother's characters and religion the source of all that is best in themselves. If we leave that heritage behind, it will not matter much if we do not leave great material possessions.

Look back over life and pick out the men and women who have exercised the most profound and up lifting influence on your lives. Have they not in the great majority of cases, been just plain men and women, artisans, laboring men, business men, housewives, teachers,—plain people doing the work of the world but all the while believing in Christ, believing in Christ's way of life and Christ's ideal of life? Because of their faith they have lived home, loving, self-sacrificing lives. Because of their faith they have left to their children, and to the children of others as well, a heritage that is better than gold or precious stones, the treasures of character and ideals which will remain with them through time and through eternity. That is the Heritage of Faith.

Remember — Nothing will do but FRY'S

Hello Daddy!

Bobbie & His Pa

(By William F. Kirk.)

I was making snowballs last night on the way home from school & I got my two hands frozen. They didn't hurt much until I got near the steam pipes at home & then they got so they hurt like the Dickens & I began to cry.

Halt, Bobby, halt, sed Pa. That is not the spirit for the son of a grate explorer to show, sed Pa. You must be hardy, sed Pa, hardy and unflinching, sed Pa. Why, sed Pa, I walked over fifty miles onst up near the coast of Labby-door, sed Pa, with my two feet frozen stiff, sed Pa. Every step I took was like tortur to me, sed Pa, but I kept moving. I have often had cold feet since that time, Bobbie, sed Pa, but never shall I forget the pangs of that trip.

Didn't you cry none? I sed Not a whimper, sed Pa. I had to be brave on account of my men. At the slightest sign of week-ness they wud have killed me, sed Pa, & left my body to be devoured by tigers. I didn't know there was any tigers in Labby-door, sed Ma. Was you ever there? sed Pa. Never onst, sed Ma. Then what do you know about Labby-door & its Flory and Fawny? sed Pa.

THE FROZEN NORTH.

There's a thing called an Eskimo Pie; Who named it? And wherefore and why?

It sounds like crude rubber And whale oil and blubber, And does not intrigue me to buy!

DRY GOODS, BOOTS, SHOES GROCERIES, Etc.

It does not often pay to send to a Department Store for what looks enticing in fashion page cuts, as often the quality is not there. It stands to reason that with the competition of manufacturers selling to merchants, goods should be sold close to department store prices. We had a pair of shoes got through a mail order house. The customer wanted us to buy at half cost or trade him. We could do neither as the sole was thin and so flexible you could roll it up like parchment and the uppers crinkled to the touch like paper. No life in the leather. A shoe which, if you went out on a wet pavement, would become soft and spongy. We simply could not place them in our stock. A special line of Oxfords in tan and blacks are selling in Calgary and Lethbridge at from $12.00 to $15.00. We are making a special price of $7.50 for them. Mail order houses quote men's overalls at a catchy figure, but the weight is not there. They are not roomy. Ours are the best union made overalls for railroad men. Then Men's Mackinaw coats we will sell actually at cost, at prices bought before the war raise. Fleet-Foot wear is now in at prices lower than last year. Our stock of children's serge and checks must be cleaned out at less than cost, even at old time prices. What a merchant wants is cash regardless of profits.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL NEWS

Mr. R. F. Barnes paid Claresholm a business visit this week.

The Manitoba provincial elections will be held the second week in July.

Everything is quiet in the Fernie coal mining district since the strike was declared.

N. Norman returned this week after several months' absence to resume work on the irrigation project.

Real estate men are already receiving inquiries for irrigated lands in the southern portion of Alberta.

Miss A. M. Wilson is in Calgary on a purchasing trip for up-to-date spring goods to augment her display of fine millinery.

Spring is here—a very chipper robin was noticed promenading in Mrs. Tripp's garden on Wednesday of last week.

A local offender against the provisions of the liquor act was up for a hearing the early part of the week and submitted to a fine of $100.

The precipitation for the 24 hours ending Tuesday the 4th instant amounted to 2 inches of rainfall and over 4 inches of snow.

The hollow concrete wall house is to be the dwelling house of the future. A five-room bungalow can be poured in a day after the frames have been put in place, and will cost in the neighborhood of $1000.

Mike Donahue, seven miles north of Macleod started in seeding wheat on Monday. The snow fall on the following day however, put an end to seeding for the time being. This is the first case of seeding reported in this part.

Mr. J. Franklin, who has spent the past winter in the Sunny South, returned to Macleod on Monday last. "Johnny" has large interests in this part and although he has spent the past five winters watching the oranges grow he makes it a point to spend his summers on his old stamping grounds.

To commemorate the fifth anniversary of Vimy Ridge the Macleod Veterans gave a dance on the evening of April 3rd. The attendance was very good, the floor was in fine shape and the music furnished by Mrs. Smith, Miss Thiel, J. Bremner, J. Edgar and J. T. Doney was extraordinarily good. Those who attended claim this dance was one of the best ever given in Macleod. The members of the G.W.V.A. take this opportunity of extending thanks to the ladies for providing and assisting with the supper.

W. G. Andrews is around again after a severe attack of flu.

Bluebirds have already arrived, a number having been seen in and around town the last few days.

H. Little is back to managerial duties at the Great West Saddlery after suffering a week from the flu.

Mrs. W. Hovis returned from a visit to Calgary last week and went on to the ranch near the Kootenai.

R. T. Barker has suffered during the past two weeks with a particularly severe attack of flu but is now on the way to recovery.

Miss Mildred Macleod, Mr. and Mrs. Clement and Mr. Clairis, of Granum, motored down to attend the G.W.V.A. ball.

Lethbridge citizens intend opening a camp site and information bureau for the benefit of tourists this coming season.

Sir John Eaton, head of the great T. Eaton Company, of Toronto, is dead. Burial took place on the 3rd inst.

The C.P.R. railway will not suffer for want of coal at least for some time to come, large stores being in evidence everywhere along the line of railway.

Former Emperor Charles of Austria-Hungary died at Funchal, Madeira, on the 1st instant. Cause of death was pneumonia with complications.

J. Struthers has been confined to the house for some days, suffering from a severe attack of the prevalent complaint.

Thomas Bissett, who has been ailing for a long time past, was removed to the isolation ward of the general hospital last week. His condition is said to be very serious.

Sixty million trees have been sent out by the Indian Head nursery station to be used solely for planting shelter belts on the prairie farms. They comprise Manitoba maple, green ash, Russian poplar, willow and caragana.

Northern hay is advancing in price, having gone up $1 a ton already with prospects of further advances. Condition of the roads and a longer haulage as well as reduced stocks are responsible for the increase in price it is claimed.

Much building will be done in the Waterton Park reserve this season we are told. The buildings to be erected being mostly bungalows for the use of families camping out during the summer months in this, the most favored of Canada's many natural playgrounds.

Mr. A. Frayne, government relief agent, will be at Geo. H. Scougall's Office, Macleod, Alta., on Monday and Tuesday, April 10th and 11th, to receive applications for hay, feed oats and seed, for the following unorganized districts: Mud Lake District No. 100; Olsen Creek District No. 100; Spring Point District No. 100.

Reports from Saskatchewan state that Premier Martin of that province has resigned his position. He has held that important office since 1916 when Walter Scott resigned owing to ill health. Hon. Dunning, the present provincial treasurer is talked of as Martin's successor. He is only 37 years of age, and will, if appointed, be the youngest premier in Canada.

Mrs. R. W. Russell, president of the Women's Institute; Mrs. Dr. Fansett, secretary of the Institute; Mrs. Thomas Peterson and Mrs. W. G. Chisholm left for Lethbridge on Wednesday to attend the district meeting of the Women's Institute being held there on Wednesday and Thursday. There will be representatives from Medicine Hat westward to the Rockies and as far north as Nanton. Mrs. Russell is giving a paper entitled "History of the Early Days in Macleod." Mrs. Fansett is giving a paper on "The Legends of the Peigan and Blood Reserve." These ladies will return to Macleod to their respective homes on Friday.

C. W. Clifton, insurance inspector for the United Grain Growers' visited Macleod this week on his regular tour of inspection.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Fansett and daughter, Miss Lillian, of Winnipeg, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. (Dr.) O. F. Fansett during the past week. A J. Fansett is a brother of Dr. Fansett.

Cambridge beat Oxford in the recent boat race. The light blues were fully two lengths ahead at the end of the third miles and made it a runaway for the remainder of the distance.

Commissioner Perry of the R.C.M. Police, who joined the force in 1882, has been granted a year's leave of absence, and will then retire. Assistant Commissioner Starnes, well-known in Macleod, will take over his duties.

Two U. S. airplanes crashed in mid-air near South Houston, Texas, on the morning of the 3rd and came down in flames. Major Simmonds, pilot of one plane was burned to death, and Lieut. Fitzpatrick, pilot of the other machine, died a few minutes later.

The wild geese came in from the south much later this year than usual, and in greatly decreasing numbers. Time was when their squaking as they flew northward was almost continuous in the early spring, but the wholesale slaughter of these noble birds in the far south has sadly decimated their ranks of late years, which is regrettable.

Judgment was handed down last Saturday in the Bennett-Shaw West Calgary election case, the appeal of R. B. Bennett, K.C., being dismissed. J. T. Shaw, the present member, was declared elected by a majority of 16 votes at a recount held after the election. All ballots marked in ink were thrown out by the recount judge and his decision has now been upheld by the appeal court of Alberta.

Judge McDonald opened court here on Saturday of last week. A man named Steve Metro, of Granum, appeared before His Honor charged with having stolen a horse, the property of one Grant Clarke, of that town. To the charge he pleaded guilty. The man with a fondness for the horse-flesh of others was given a year with hard labor in the Lethbridge jail, in which to think matters over. Mr. J. W. McDonald, K.C., of McDonald, Martin and Mackenzie, appeared on behalf of the Crown, while the prisoner was undefended.

Contractors engaged on the Lethbridge Northern Irrigation ditch are very busy these days getting everything in readiness for an early start. Supplies to last the entire season are being collected, the necessary men engaged, and the line of the ditch will soon become a hive of industry. There will be no lack of work for those who are desirous of obtaining same, and at good wages, only a slight reduction having been made from that paid the men last season. By the time the first snow falls it is thought the greater part of the ditch will be ready to receive the water.

Present indications are that this coming season will be all that could wish for, at least that is the opinion of many old timers. Of late considerable snow has fallen and being followed by warm weather all the moisture has been absorbed into the soil. With a warm spell following the growth of vegetation of all kinds will be unusually rapid. We are told that further south a much greater fall of snow occurred than here and that the moisture has gone into the ground a considerable depth. Let us hope the June rains, upon which agriculturists mainly depend, will not fail us this season.

The farmers who met in Macleod last week petitioned the Minister of the Interior for permission to range their stock on certain portions of the Indian Reserves in this section of the country on which there is said to be an abundance of feed. If they can secure grazing privileges all well and good, but if satisfactory arrangements can not be made it means these men will have to go out of cattle altogether, which would be a calamity, it being a well known fact that the many small breeders turn far more cattle on the market than do their brethren owning the larger ranch areas.

W. H. Shield, M.L.A., returned home Friday from his first session of the Alberta Legislature. He speaks in high terms of the Edmonton city members, and the position they took in the discussion of the irrigation project in the house. They were fair all the way through, in fact very few of the northern members opposed the legislation. Several were asked by outsiders to oppose it, but it was a reasonable attack when it did come. Only by some in the capital itself, who apparently did not know the ins and outs of it did any opposition come. Then one of the capital papers took it up, but failed in any attempt to change the members. Mr. Shield thinks that we must now work to get the settlers on the land, and in this way show the government that we intend to do our part, and so prove to the province that irrigation can and will be a success in Southern Alberta.

Mr. Harvey Bruce, of Waterton Park, was in town on Monday, not forgetting to make The Times a very pleasant call. Harvey considers the coming season gives every promise of being everything that the farmer could desire.

The stories in circulation concerning the Many Island oil field have as is customary been greatly exaggerated. As a matter of fact only a suggestion of oil has been struck as yet, but heavy gas in large quantities has been met with. The drillers are hopeful, however, believing that the oil sands will be struck at a depth not far below the present level of the well.

Certain it is that great excitement prevails on both sides of the line in the vicinity of the Sweet Grass Hills, where the boring is being gone on with. Another reason for much excitement is that in the vicinity of these Hills extensive gold deposits exist, this fact being known to all old timers. Owing, however, to a great scarcity of water in the neighborhood they could not be successfully mined. With an abundance of gas, pumping plants will be installed and water brought in, making it possible to work the long neglected gold deposits.

Adjutant Hardy and Captain Hammond, of the local corps of the Salvation Army, visited Claresholm on Monday on behalf of the Foreign Self-Denial Effort. The canvassing of the town occupied the whole day, Mr. McKinney, a resident of the town, very materially assisting. The townspeople gave cheerfully and liberally, the total amount collected being the nice sum of $170.15. The officers returned the same evening very well pleased with the result of the day's efforts. The adjutant has since, through the columns of the Claresholm paper, returned sincere thanks to those who so kindly contributed.

ODE TO NONSENSE.

I'm often melancholy,
An hour or maybe two,
When hearing words of folly
And thinking they are true;
And when I have expelled 'em,
I have the evidence
Of how we very seldom
Use common sense.
If riches led to sorrow
In every single case,
Pray who would steal and borrow
To join the gilded race?
If love engendered sadness,
Were fame an empty game,
Would anything but madness
Want love and fame?
So, when someone persuades me
That life is not worth while,
Unhappiness pervades me
And everything seems vile—
Until I answer (giving Due credit to my head)—
"If life were not worth living,
We'd all be dead!"
